Vilnius Business College

LIBRARY RULES

1. Students and faculty members who wish to use publications or other documents held by the library must register by filling out a reader registration form.
2. Please note: You are responsible for all publications listed on your reader registration form.
3. Readers must report any changes to their last name, phone number, or degree program.
4. If a publication is lost or irreparably damaged, you may replace it with an equivalent publication or reimburse the library for the publication's market value.
5. The library staff member who checks out the materials determines how long you may keep checked-out items or high-demand publications. The last copy of a book is not checked out.
6. You can extend the loan period for publications. You can do this by visiting the library or by calling or emailing us.
7. If someone else is currently reading the book you need, you can place a hold on it. As soon as the book is returned, the library will set it aside for you.
8. Only students and staff of the college may borrow publications to take home.
9. Students on the VVK campus can access the library's subscribed databases, e-books, and the services provided by the virtual library.
10. Students and faculty members receive guidance on searching for information in the library's subscribed databases, the virtual library, and the ALMA book catalog.
11. A library staff member registers academic documents or their metadata in the Lithuanian Academic Electronic Library (eLABa).
12. Readers review received publications on site and report any defects they notice to library staff. Readers who fail to report defects are liable for damaged publications.
13. Library patrons must return borrowed publications and other materials by the specified due date or renew their loan period.
14. Do not remove publications checked out for home use from the library premises unless their checkout has been recorded in the library's information system;
15. Upon graduating from the college or discontinuing their studies, students must return all books to the library.
